St. Nicolas is one of the traditions in The Netherlands. We celebrate it always between 20th November and 5th December.

5th December is the birthday of St Nicolas, who lives in Spain and every year he comes on his boat and his “Black Petes” to The Netherlands. His horse is AMERIGO

In the night the “black Petes” come in your house and put in your shoe a little present and pepernoten.

They are black because they need to go in the chimney to bring the presents

Pepernoten is a typical food at St Nicolas'.

In the Netherlands we have lots of traditions:
like St Martin (Sinte Maarten in Dutch), then the children make a lampion and go outside to sing from door to door and get sweets from the person who live in that house.

On St Martin's (11th November) you have a lantern and put some light in it, you can go from door to door and sing a St Martin song..

the song that you sing when you put your shoe in the room is usually this:

“The Missile”

If a missile had a brain and a heart
instead of a box and computer parts,

I would sit and write:

Hello, dear missile — you should leave at once.

Otherwise you'll fall and crash.

Perhaps you could bring some flowers
when you get here

— what a lesson that would teach the men who sent you!

“.. Se un missile avesse un
cervello e un cuore
e non un involucro metallico
di un processore,
mi siederei tranquillo e
scriverei:

Ciao, caro missile –
subito devi volare, così non potrai cadere e in
mille pezzi volteggiare Potresti, ad esempio, regalare
fiori, spargendoli per aria Immagina ... che lezione per
i programmatori, che alla
morte e distruzione ti
vogliono destinare ...
